MAYOR OUSTS NEGRO TENANT M. Batterton Receives Judgmen

Against "Uncle Jack" Coats. Mayor J. M. Batterton received judgment against "Uncle Jack" Coats, a negro, for $75 back rent and possession of the house the old negro had lived in three years, in the justice court this afternoon.

The negro contended in court that he had paid more than he was credited with, part of which was in coffee and sugar which he had earned by making brooms and baskets for a store at Hallsville. The records showed that most of the rent had been paid by various charitable organizations of Columbia. J. S. Bucknell, justice of the peace, gave the negro five days in which to find another home

A group of children in quaint Hallowe'en costumes visited "Uncle Jack" last night carrying baskets of food.

The movement was set on foot by Mrs. D. A. Clark and nineteen youngsters from the vicinity of Range Line participated in the event.

"Uncle Jack" is a well known Columbia negro and is remembered especially for his ability at weaving baskets. Last year he had the distinction of receiving a personal letter from President Wilson, thanking him for a hand-made basket which the old negro sent him. He was formerly the slave of Judge Coats and for a number of years was owned by the Cockrell family. He says that he was sold for $1.750 when he was 29 years old. He says that he is now 83 years of age, but he is said by Mrs. Clark. for whose father he once worked, to be nearer 93 than 83. During the Civil War he fought in the Confederate army under General F. M. Cockrell.
